

So you want to create the Perfect Pitch but aren't sure where to start?
Follow these 3 simple steps:

Step 1

Research your target company

The idea is to get to know who you are reaching out to in order to develop a specific angle that will resonate with the prospect. You want your company to stand out from the crowd (in a good way) so for that, you need to understand what they do, the potential pain points they might have, or present ideas that could interest them.

- Check news publications
- Look at their website
- Monitor social media presence
- Find contacts to reach out to

Step 2

Determine exactly how your offer can help

Here you are looking to present your value proposition. You want your prospect to see the benefits that your product/service can offer and for that you need to respond to the question, "What's in it for me?"

- Position your product to respond to a potential need you found from your research
- Create a simple, to-the-point introduction to explain why you are contacting them (if possible use humor to grab their attention)

Step 3

Encourage a dialogue

The end to any great pitch must compel your prospect to move to the next stage—a meeting with you to learn more. You want your message to peak the curiosity of your prospect, and end with a bang.

- Ask a question to inspire a response
- Define a clear call-to-action by suggesting a (physical or online) meeting date and time
- Leave your contact details so that they can respond

Apply. Rinse. Repeat!

Here's an example pitch and a basic template that you can use to get you started:
